PREFACE.

In the preparation of this little work I have endeavored to accomplish the following :

I. To combine simplicity with accuracy, and at the same time to be thorough, making mention of all events mentioned in school histories.

II. By consulting different histories to include all events worthy of mention thus avoiding the confusion arising from the use of various histories in class.

III. To furnish merely an outline of the subject to be filled out by such books as the student may be able to procure.

IV. To provide a series of diagrams to be written on the blackboard, as far as possible from memory, thus establishing dates and events in the mind and enabling the student to recite from memory, making use of the brief outlines written on the board instead of reciting by questions and answers.

That it will accomplish these few objects is the wish of the
